

WEAVING A WEB

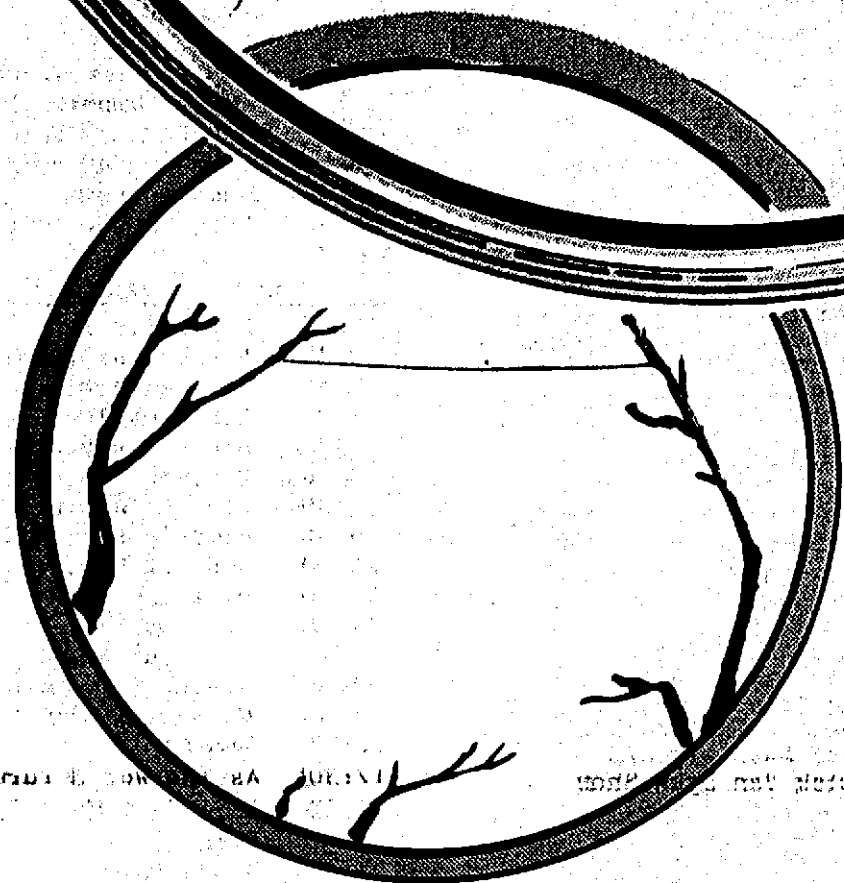

In Nature's daily cycle, it is not the larger, or stronger, who always survive. Throughout the varied animal and insect worlds, each creature is given its own means of survival. For 30,000-40,000 species of spiders, Nature has provided a distinctive characteristic: the ability to spin silk. Though not all spiders spin webs to trap their meals, those that do easily can capture and kill insects larger in size and strength than themselves.

These spiders, ranging from 1/25 to 2 inches long, secrete the silk through spinning organ secretions located near the lower end of their sac-like abdomen. Since the material cannot be forced out, a hind leg draws it out. The liquid hardens upon contact with the air and is controlled, in flow as well as type and form, for the web-making needs.

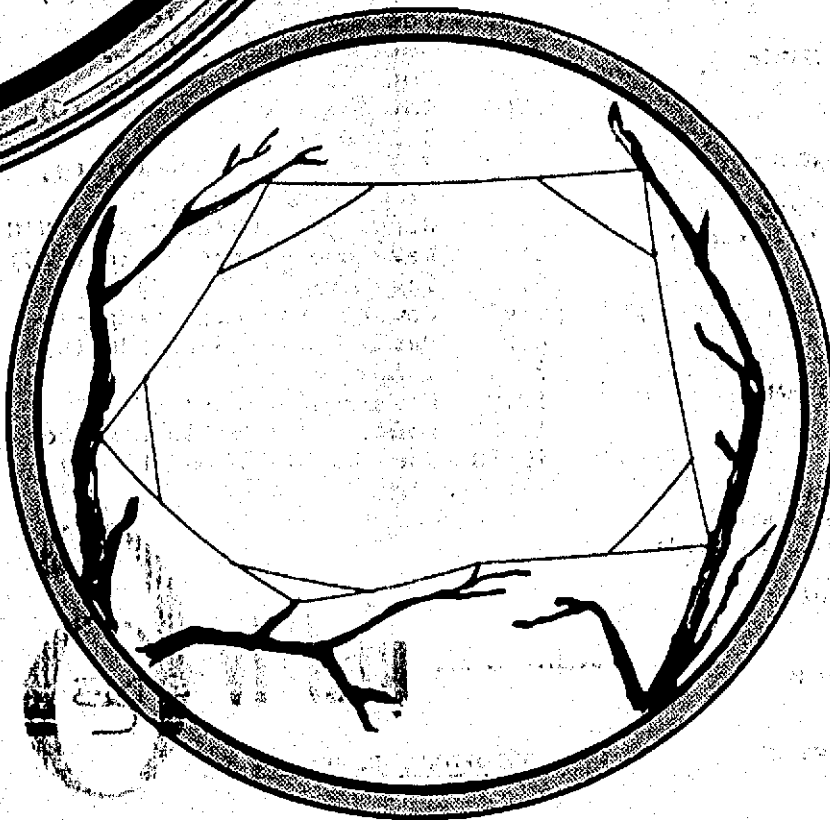

The web threads, some as thin as 0.03 microns (1/1,000,000 of an inch) have an ability to stretch 1/5 their length before breaking. These webs are created at one sitting, a one to four hour job, usually at dawn or dusk.

Once completed, the spider waits "in the parlor," either at web's center or on a corner, for insects to become enmeshed. Held firmly, the insect is easy prey, regardless of size, to be enshrouded in silk and devoured at will.

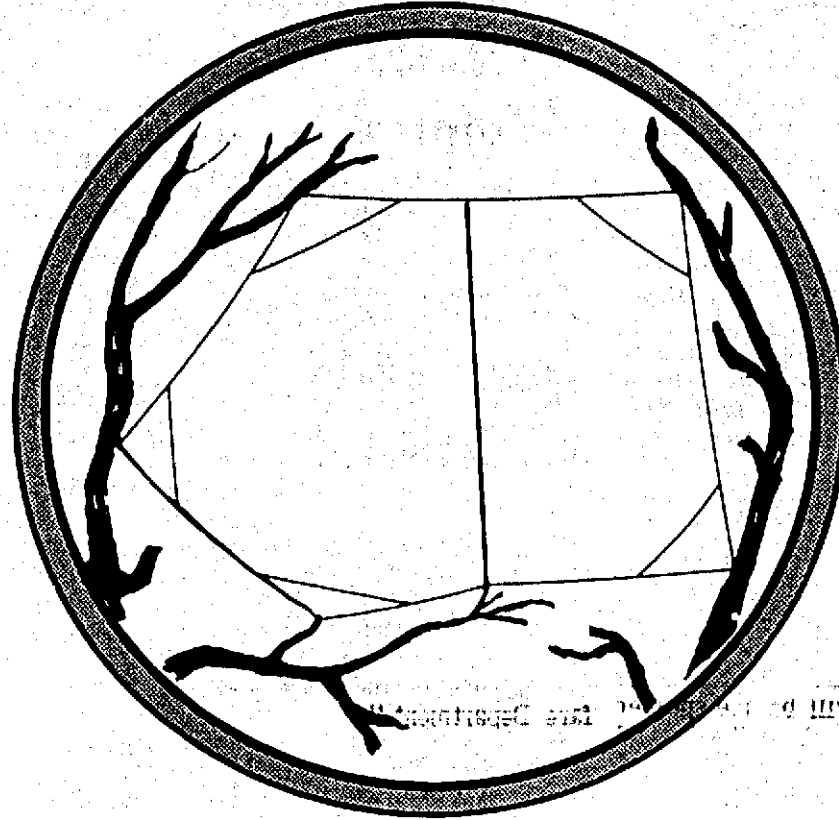

This insect consumption helps Nature's balance. At the same time, spider webs create a masterpiece of delicate beauty and composition.

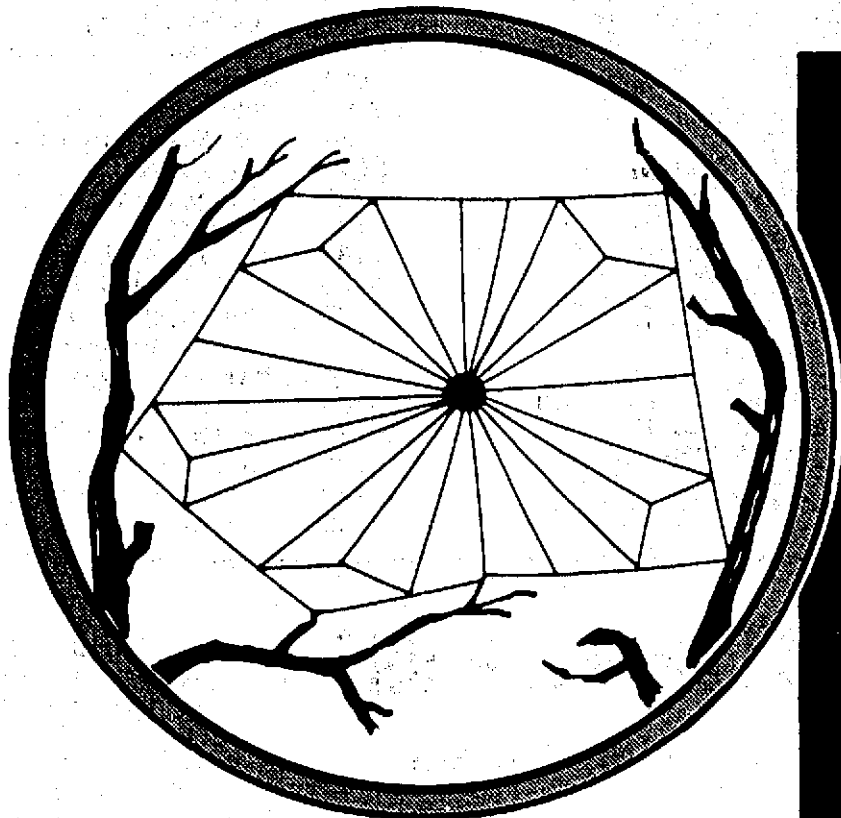

1. A spider creates a bridge line to begin the web.

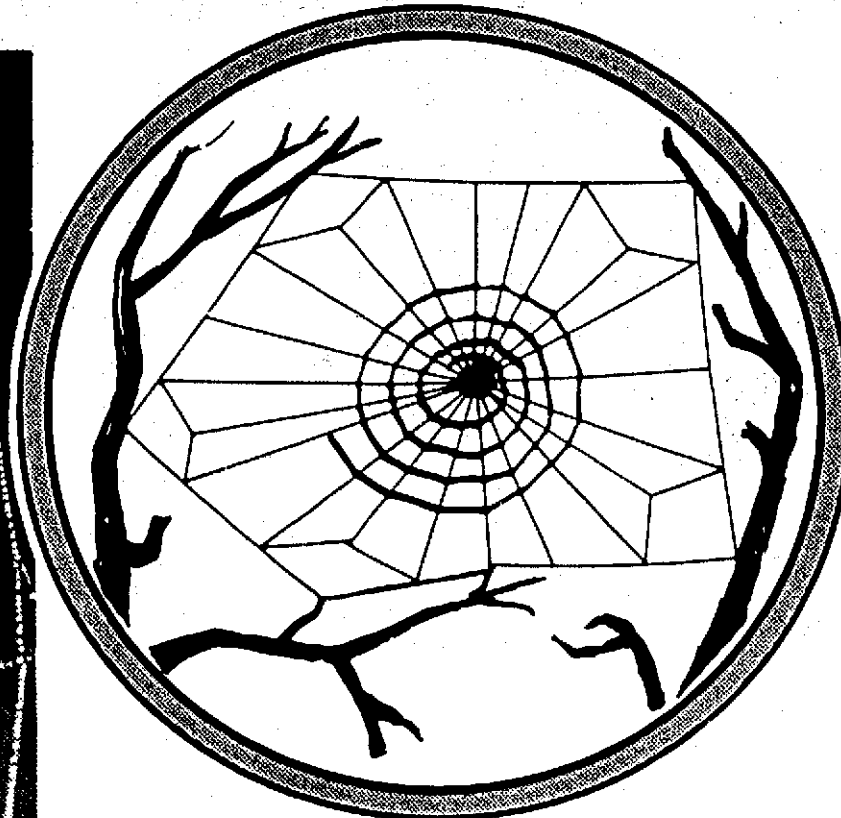

2. Short lines support the strong foundational lines.

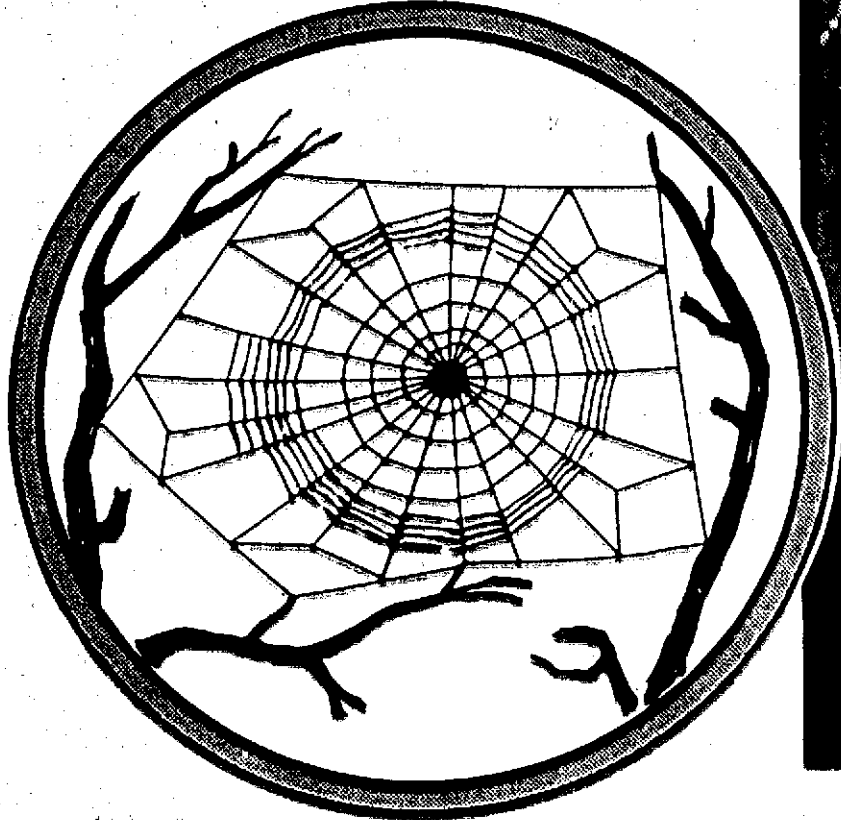

3. A center line is placed to begin outward lines from center.

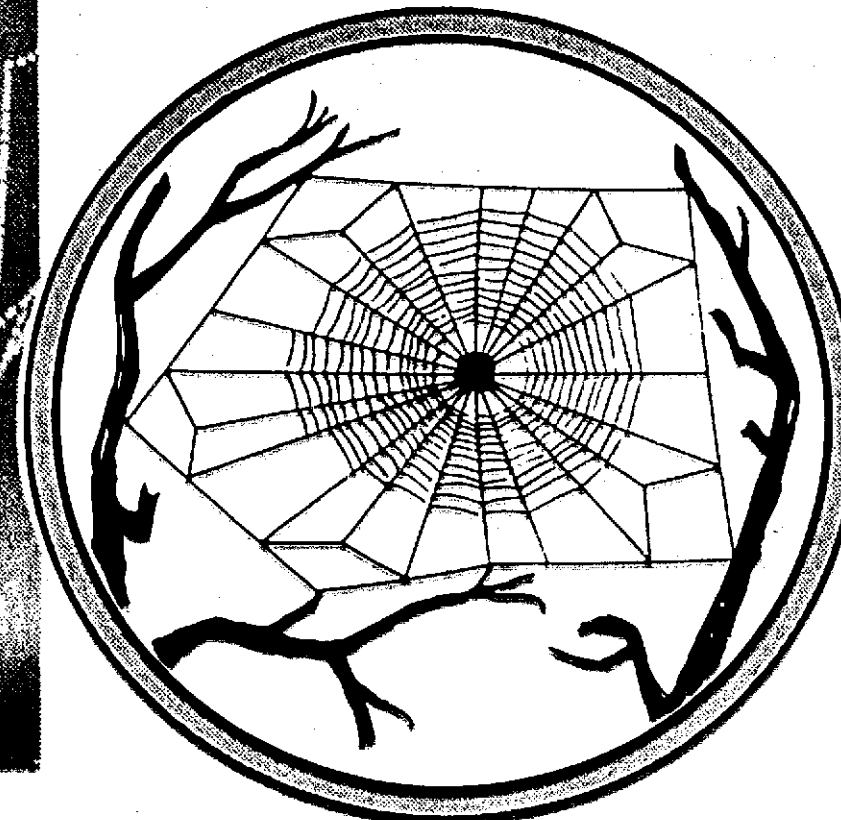

4. With spoke-like lines completed, a mesh is formed in the center for additional strength.

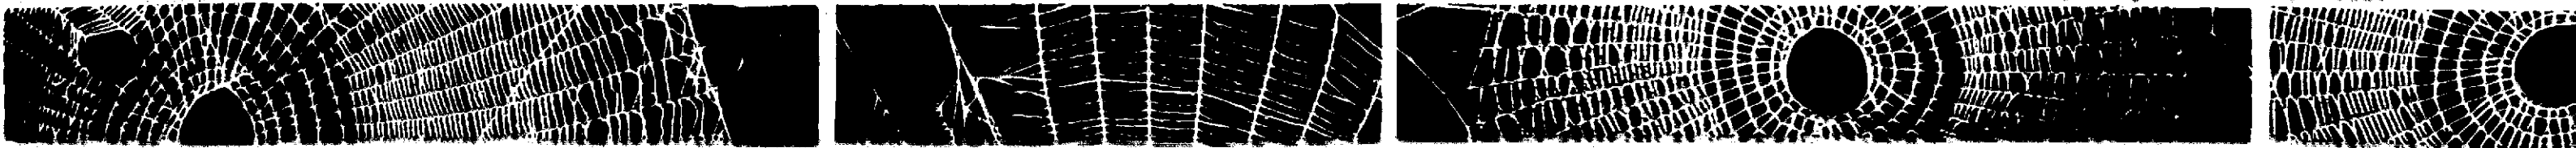

5. A temporary, non-sticky thread is strung to support the spider's final construction.

6. The sticky threads are spread to entrap insects.

7. Final stage is the dropping away of the temporary thread and final spinning of inner sticky threads.

Youth Beat

University of California Santa Barbara Issues "Facts of Life": Booklet for parents. Designed to encourage dialogue between parents and students. Urges parents not to think they have failed because students do not think and act as they did. Urges open door despite differences. "Sex, Pot and Booze" a typical chapter theme. Booklet was jointly edited by students and faculty. Some of the findings were subjected to derisive remarks (and laughter) by U.C.S.B. students who felt report on the goody-two-shoes side and not actual-factual and shocking enough to stir parents into recommended dialogue.

Booklet urges parents to take steps to keep in step — adult education on the generation gap.

THEATER OWNERS BULLY TV NETWORKS: Complainers about television should save big load of venom for super pressure tactics of National Association of Theater Owners. Their latest antics: Hammer away at "current" motion pictures on TV. "Welcome to Hard Times," seven-months-old MGM feature, was shown on ABC. NATO prez Julian Rifkin complained to Jack Valenti, president of Motion Picture Association of America. NATO refuses to compete for "audience" by improving their physical facilities. Teens are wild, simply wild, in their indictment of theaters AND the outlandish prices of concessionaire grazing-matter. One disgruntled teen paid a rousing $2.50 to see a so-so show at a theater recently bought up by a major chain. After a glowing on-screen commercial telling the audience how "new" EVERYTHING would now be, including the refreshment counter, a quick trip for goodies revealed only 1/2-dozen kinds of candy — all the jumbo-priced 50c size — and no chewing gum! Only drinks were 10c size from a 35c machine. She's never going back. Young America is the backbone of support for motion picture theaters. The "wide screen" television set is here — not just "on the drawing board." When it is put on the market, "home entertainment center" will rise.

Big Time Spenders: Today's teens spend over 15 billion dollars a year. More than national income of 50 years ago.

GETTING TO THE GRASS ROOTS: New U.C. Berkeley Marijuana Study gives pause. Says low potency of most available marijuana suggests that it is actually less harmful than alcohol. Is it really? Are more long-range studies in progress? — they ought to be. Untold numbers of teens will suffer physically, emotionally and legally from too little too late — information on drugs.

ZAPPING: Alternate word for "happenings" and for newer replacement word "arrivalment."

HELEN HELP US!
by Helen Bottel

YOUTH ASKED FOR IT! This column is for young people, their problems and pleasures, their troubles and fun. As with the rest of Helen Help US! it welcomes laughs but won't dodge a serious question with a brush-off.

Send your teenage questions to YOUTH ASKED FOR IT, care of Helen Help US! this newspaper.

EARLY BIRD IS WORM Dear Helen: I went steady with this fella for about a year and found out you get taken for granted, but very seldom get taken out.

He'd stop in to eat and watch television and he'd talk on the telephone, but even though he had a part-time job, he hardly ever even bought me a hamburger. So we broke up, partly because he got another girl.

Now he's started calling up at 1:00 and 2:00 in the morning, and loading me with his problems. Usually this is after he comes home from his date with the other girl.

I talk, for old times sake, but when he gripes about all the money he spends I begin to think he's either a liar or a worm. What should I do? — SLEEPY THOUGH JILTED

Dear S.T.J.: Give this early worm the "bird." You don't owe him a listening ear. — H

Dear Helen: I'm 13, Everyone has said I'm a good girl and I've tried to be. My parents are proud of me and I love them very much, but I failed them and myself and everyone that knows me.

I was very mature for my age, so my folks said I could date this boy of 18. He wanted to marry me but I said I couldn't until I was out of school. He said anything could happen — he might be dead in five years, as he has some kind of disease — and he needed me so much.

So now I am three months pregnant and scared to death. Helen, I confused sympathy for love. I know now I'm just a kid and I want to finish school and go to college, and be the good girl I used to be. Is there some where I can go so that my folks won't have to know?

They'd hate me or disown me if I ran off and got married. Besides, my boyfriend got sick after I told him and I haven't seen him in three weeks.

It's all my fault and I want to die. — CAN'T FACE IT

Dear Can't: No, honey it isn't all your fault; if your parents deserve your love, they'll take most of the blame for allowing a 13-year-old child to date a come man of 18.

Marriage isn't the answer. A home for unwed mothers is, and your folks can arrange it through your family doctor, who is pledged to secrecy. — H

Dear Helen: I'm afraid. Of fox hunts to spur on the many things, I'm a health le-

In rubber bridge you always want trumps to break. In duplicate play a bad trump break tends to separate the men from the boys.

South wins the heart lead with his ace and lays down the king of trumps for the start of what should be a routine operation in dummy play. But East shows out and South must take a new look at the hand.

He can play two more rounds of trumps and go after diamonds, but if the defense is on its toes and East holds the queen and two other diamonds, that line of play will give the defense a chance to collect one trick in each suit.

The alert declarer should go back to the bidding and decide that the odds are that East will hold every missing high card. He will remember that East bid one and three hearts while West kept passing and that East was vulnerable.

In that case, there is a simple but elegant solution to the problem of making the contract. South can end play East.

Usually an end play is associated with the last few tricks of a hand. This end play took place at trick three. South led out his nine of hearts. East was on lead and was end played with ten cards in his hand. A heart lead would allow South to discard one of his losers and ruff in dummy. A diamond lead would give away his diamond trick. The only lead left to East was one of his high clubs, so he led the queen.

This gave South a chance to

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Roger Maris And Bell's Palsy

By WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.S.

Roger Maris, the oft-injured ballplayer who this past season helped the St. Louis Cardinals to a World Championship, is reported to be suffering from Bell's palsy.

This is a serious affliction which begins with pain below and behind the ear and two or three days later suddenly develops into a paralysis of one side of the face.

It distorts the face badly; the muscles on one side are motionless; half the mouth sags; the patient has difficulty drinking, with fluids escaping from the corner of the mouth. He can't smile; eyelids droop and can't be closed, exposing the eye to infection; and sometimes there is a loss of taste in half the tongue.

The cause is unknown. The mechanism which causes the paralysis is a spasm of a blood vessel that supplies the nerve. This produces a deficiency in blood supply with resulting swelling of the nerve as it lies in its tiny canal in a bone on the side of the face.

A mild deficiency of blood supply causes only a partial paralysis of short duration ending in complete recovery. In more severe cases recovery takes longer, sometimes months.

It's reported that in about 80 per cent of the severe cases recovery is complete, but in 20 per cent there is only partial recovery and some permanent disfigurement.

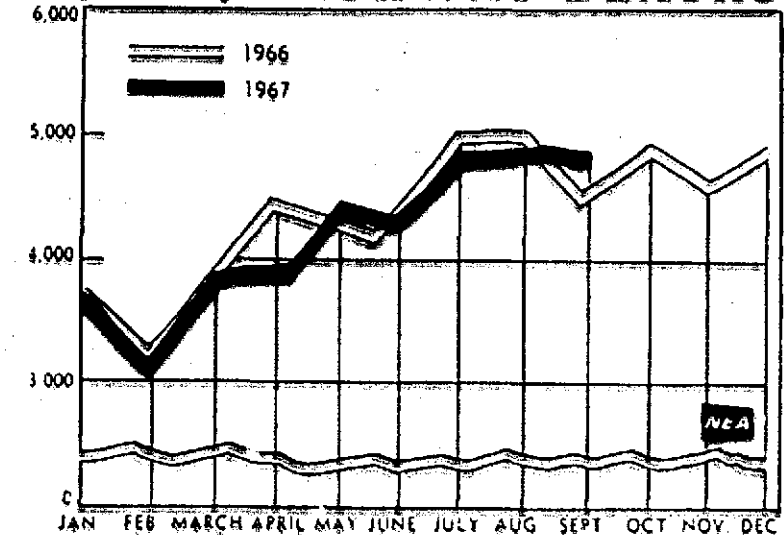

Treatment consists of injections of intravenous procaine; sometimes steroids are given to reduce swelling. Blood thinners are used if a clot is suspected.

The longer the disease lasts the greater the chance of permanent disfigurement. Therefore, if recovery is not complete after a reasonable period of time, surgery becomes necessary in order to decompress the nerve or perform a nerve graft.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Please send your questions about dental health to Dr. Lawrence in care of this paper. While he cannot answer each letter personally, letters of general interest will be answered in this column.

1966-67 HIGHWAY DEATHS

Statistics based on National Safety Council estimates show motor vehicle deaths for the first nine months of 1967 were slightly less than for the same period in 1966, although Americans traveled more miles in '67.

Tigers Defeated by Owls

BY LINDA WILLIAMS
Yeger Sports Editor

The Yeger Tigers were defeated once again by the Columbia Owls.

The Tigers losing with 24 points. While Columbia closing the game had 92 points. Our boys just weren't ready for the big tackle with the Owls Thursday night. The Tigers will suffer a great loss from this. They have never been out scored this bad before.

Magnolia offense ran off with the boys from the beginning of the clock. This really was beating. The points for the Tigers were made by Block, Isley, and Brown.

Leaving that scene, we see that the Junior boys also were torn to pieces by the Magnolia Owls Junior boys. The Tigers left the victory in the hands of the Owls.

Fearing some of you didn't see the "tiger" mixer for the remaining season here it is again.

Promoter Wants New Officials

OAKLAND (AP) — Don Char, promoter of the Thad Spencer-Jerry Quarry heavyweight elimination series fight Saturday, would like to see new officials in the ring, and at ringside.

"We need a new set of officials to improve the scoring," he told newsmen, "and I'd like to see a school for referees. An ex-fighter doesn't always make the best referee."

Quarry fought a disputed 10-round draw with former champion Floyd Patterson in their first fight and then scored a close 12-round decision over Patterson in their second meeting.

There has been man-in-the-street speculation that Quarry would get the officials' verdict in a close fight on the contention he is a sentimental favorite here — and that the officials could be swayed by applause.

Spencer, 24, 203 with a 32-7 record, is a San Franciscan but never has drawn well there.

Quarry, 22, now a Los Angeles resident, spent his boyhood in the San Francisco Bay area. He weighs 193 and has a 25-1-4 record.

Saturday's fight, scheduled for 5 p.m., EST, will be televised to the United States and Mexico City and, via Satellite, to Europe and Japan. Northern California will be blacked out.

MRS. MINNIE L. CARRIGAN

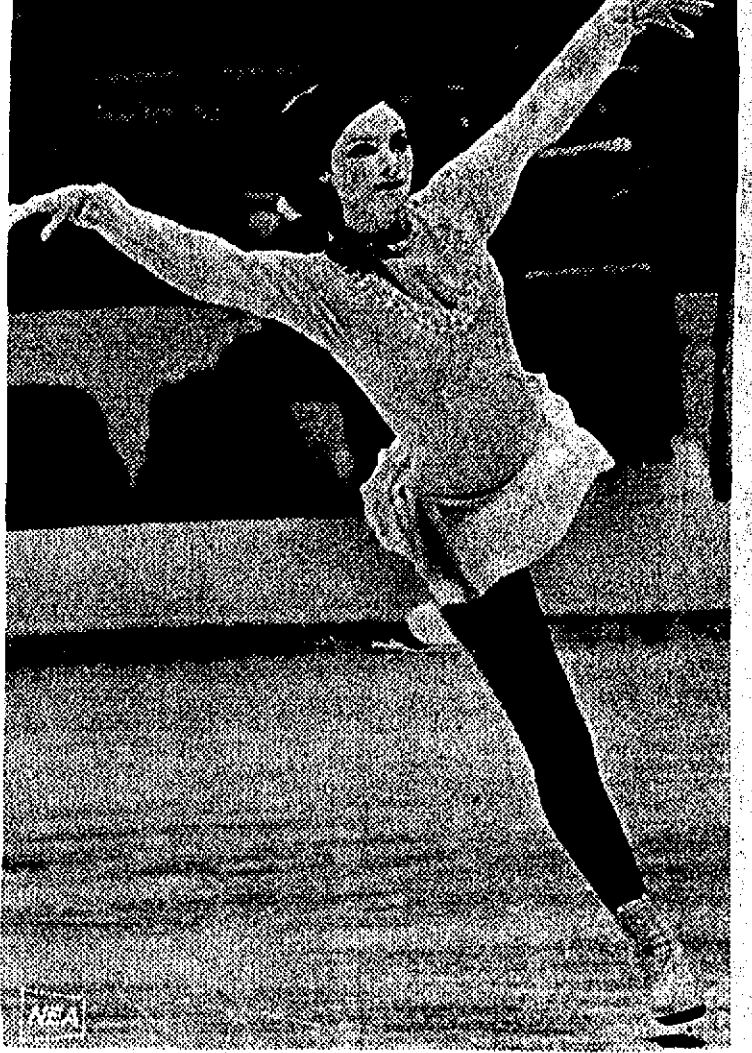

Mrs. Minnie L. Carrigan died Tuesday at her home in El Dorado. She was the mother of Mrs. Esther Mae Stuart of Hope.

Funeral services will be held Sunday, February 4 at 2 p.m. at the First Baptist Church in Washington with burial in Washington cemetery.

Sims Funeral Home of El Dorado is in charge of arrangements.

This will be the scene from Grenoble, France, and the 10th Winter Olympiad which starts Feb. 6 and features among its attractions the Alpine skiing events and figure skating, starring U.S. favorite Peggy Fleming (below).

Outdoor Notebook

NEW YORK—(NEA)—You can see the outdoors in Lee Wulff's face. The forehead and hair are swept back like a pine on a windward cliff; the skin at the corners of his eyes crinkle from squinting into a thousand suns, and weeks in the shadows of Manhattan have not dimmed the permanent sunstain.

Now a resident of Koon, N.H., Lee was born in Alaska and spent the first 12 years of his life in that state when it was a territory—and a wild one at that, like something straight out of Jack London. Later, he graduated from Stanford University and studied art in Paris. But his roots in the outdoors were deep, and he eventually devoted full time to conservation work, and now is one of the best-known writers and photographers on wildlife.

"Oddly enough," Lee recalled, "my father wasn't particularly interested in fishing or hunting. I remember once in Alaska that the women were being bothered by bears interrupting their berry picking, so my father went out with a gun to guard them. He took me along, too. We didn't see any bears, but my father shot a hornet's nest, grabbed me and ran. That was the extent of my adventures in the outdoors with him."

"Fish were so plentiful in the Alaskan rivers then that it seems almost incredible now. I started fishing for them when I was very small. There was no trick to it, you just went down to the stream and snaggd them with a shark hook on the end of a bamboo pole."

"There was a guy in town named Slop Jake who picked up money by catching fish for the sled dogs. The town was full of sled dogs in those days. I used to help Slop Jake catch the fish. You could walk up a stream with a spear in your hand and see hundreds of these silver bullets whizzing past you. Spearfishing was sort of like shooting skeet; you had to lead them and take into consideration such factors as refraction. By the time I left there, of course, I was using tackle."

From this coarse introduction to fishing, Lee has gone on to become world-famous for taking big fish with light tackle (marlin on fly rod, for example).

Winter Olympics Guide

BOBSLEDDING

The bobsled run, located about 40 miles from Grenoble at Alpe d'Huez, is 1,500 meters long with a vertical drop of about 150 yards and has six curves, one maze and four bends to test the daring drivers. Both the two-man and four-man sleds engage in two runs down the track on each of two days, with the final ranking based on total composite times for all four runs. Each nation is permitted to enter two teams in both two-man and four-man competition.

ICE HOCKEY

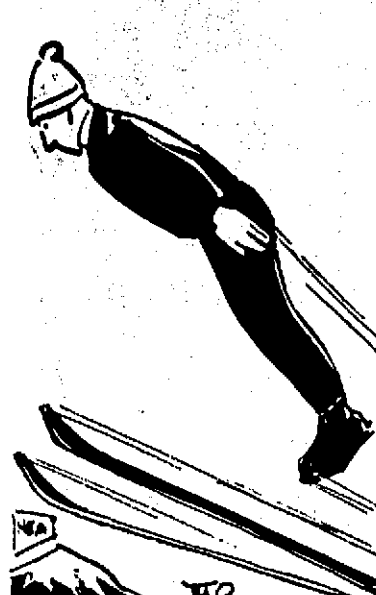

Eighteen men are allowed for each nation's team, the championship going to the country that wins the most of its seven games. The contests will be held at the Ice Stadium in Grenoble. Olympic rules are the same as in U.S. college competition, in that body checking can be done only in the defensive zone, whereas in the Canadian professional rules, checking can occur in offensive, defensive and neutral zones alike. Also, the red line serves only as a divider. There is no two-line pass rule in Olympic competition, which makes for longer passes.

FIGURE SKATING

The skaters must follow rigid, well-defined progressions in patterns, arranged in degrees of increasing difficulty. The patterns, called "school or compulsory figures," must be skated to the satisfaction of the judges. Compulsory figures count 60 per cent of the over-all grade. Because of this emphasis in scoring, the competitor must perfect skills in tracing circles, turns, change of blade edge and other required patterns.

The skater completes his performance by engaging in "free" skating, which entails movements of his own invention or those not specified in compulsory phase.

NORDIC SKIING

Nordic events are divided into three classes: cross-country, combined event consisting of 15-kilometer race plus jumping from 70-meter hill, and the special ski jumping—competing from both the 70- and 90-meter hills. In the latter, each of the nation's four entrants gets two jumps, with total points earned for distance and form determining final standings.

In the combined, each athlete competes in a 15,000-meter race, followed by two jumps from the 70-meter hill. Cross-country racing consists of 15-, 30- and 50-kilometer individual races and a grueling relay race.

SPEED SKATING

Only two skate at a time in this event, since the race is against time. There are two separated lanes on the track—the inside lane being shorter than the outside. In order to skate the same distance, the racers change lanes after each lap. The speed ring is 400 meters long, with two five-meter lanes. Each nation may enter four men in the 500- and 1,500-meter races and three in the 5,000 and 10,000 meters. Three women skaters are allowed in each of their four events: 500, 1,000, 1,500 and 3,000 meters.

BIATHLON

This event, a combination of skiing and shooting, is held over a 20-kilometer cross-country course with rifle shooting at four different ranges spaced along the course at 5, 10.4, 14 and 16.7 kilometers, respectively. Each man carries 20 rounds of ammunition and takes five shots at a single target on each range. The competitors are scored for elapsed time over the course and marksmanship. Two minutes are added to the total time for every miss. The event consists of individual competition and a four-man relay.

LUGE

Also known as tobogganing, the luge competition will be held at Villard-de-Lans, 20 miles from Grenoble. The luge run is 1,000 meters long with a vertical drop of 120 yards and consists of five bends, two curves each to the left and right and one double "S" curve.

The single-seat races will be run in four heats. All times are electrically recorded and final ranking is based on total of times for all four runs. The two-seaters will be run in two heats, with final ranking also determined on composite time basis.

ALPINE SKIING

Events in both divisions are slalom, giant slalom and downhill. They are run individually, against time, which accounts for final placings. Only one run down the course is permitted in the giant slalom and downhill events; each entrant is permitted two runs in the slalom, with final placings determined by elapsed time of the two runs. The downhill is a test of speed and strength and is the most dangerous of the skiing events. Slalom events are not as long nor as steep as the downhill but test the skier's ability because of the gates on the course he must negotiate. The giant slalom is longer and steeper than regular slalom.

A Kidd for a Man's Job

GRENOBLE, France—(NEA)—The sad part of the Olympic Games, for domestic consumption, is that in the area of most popular appeal, the American male is a cipher. He looks great making a parallel track through fresh powder snow in a cigarette commercial, but put him in international competition, and he bombs.

The 10th Winter Olympiad is upon us, with formal opening ceremonies here on Feb. 6, and no United States skier, male species, has ever won a gold medal.

The odds are 15-1 against an American breakthrough on the slopes of Chamrousse, 30 miles east of the host city. The oddsmaker is Tommy Corcoran, who has been one of the futile Americans.

Corcoran competed in the 1960 Winter Olympics at Squaw Valley, Calif., and finished fourth in the grand slalom. It was the closest an American had ever come to an Olympic Alpine medal in the men's events. Then in 1964, at Innsbruck, Billy Kidd and Jimmy Heuga tantalized us with symptoms of progress.

Kidd finished second in the men's slalom, only 14/100ths of a second behind the gold medalist. He got a silver bauble. Jimmy Heuga, also of the USA, finished third for a bronze medal. Both Kidd and Heuga are back in action and skiing well, which should be a basis for optimism.

"I have to be candid," says Corcoran, "and somewhat pessimistic. Our hopes really ride with Kidd and Heuga. Billy had a series of accidents the last two years and has made a remarkable recovery. He has to be given a chance. He skis on equal terms with the Killys of the world."

"But you have to be pessimistic because he's only one against 15. There are that many topnotch skiers on an international level capable of winning a gold medal on any given day. That makes Billy 15-1."

Even Jean Claude Killy, who has been the most glamorous skier in the world the last three years, isn't a cinch against the strong Austrian, Swiss and German contingents converging on Grenoble.

"We've made progress in our Alpine program," admits Corcoran. "All of the Alpine countries—France, Austria, Italy, Germany, Switzerland—have made corresponding progress."

Implicit is the fact that they started ahead of the United States and, therefore, remain that way. The European skiers are literally nursed on skis. They live at the bottom of the hill, and the top represent a way of life. Our kids aren't discovered until they get involved in such mitigating activities as college and the discovery of the opposite sex, and so their competitive drive isn't channeled into championship skiing.

NANCY GREENE

SUZANNE CHAFFEE

Kidd is unique because he was raised in Vermont snow country and has been skiing competitively half of his 24 years. The drive to excel came entirely from within himself. When Billy started out, an American skier was one shade lower than a Ping-pong champion on the sports scale.

"I remember coming into the airport in New York," he recalls, "with a pair of skis. And somebody asked me, 'What do you do, jump?' That's all they associated skis with."

"But in 1964, when I got back from Innsbruck, there was already a change. I got into a cab in Manhattan, and the driver immediately asks me, 'Hey, aren't you Billy Kidd?'"

Of course, anyone seeing Suzy Chaffee would be interested, name or not. Suzy is a lissome blonde attraction on the American women's team, which has had considerably more success over the years in international competition. Gretchen Fraser won a gold medal in the 1949 slalom, and Andrea Mead Lawrence established herself as the top woman skier in the world four years later with triumphs in both the slalom and giant slalom. Jean Saubert came away from the '64 Winter Games with silver and bronze medals in the same events.

Suzy's ambitions are a little more reckless. Her sights are on picking up a gold medal in the downhill, which is the dragstrip of skiing.

Although the women's field is also cluttered with such class as Nancy Greene of Canada and Marielle Goitschel of France, no one's quoting odds against a breakthrough by Suzy or one of her teammates.

It's one case where we can say, as in France, "Vive la difference!"

Judging from recent absenteeism in the shop, the doctor who gave the fly shots is a mighty poor marksman.

Morals don't necessarily improve as one ages, but inability to misbehave certainly increases.

Johnson Says Cong Uprising Has Failed

By JACK BELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's assessment that the Viet Cong uprising this week failed to achieve its military and psychological goals in South Vietnam is challenged by congressional critics of his war policies.
But Congress members who favor those policies gave the President solid backing for his statement at a Friday news conference that the Communists had lost an attempt to overthrow the Saigon government and force the United States to accept a coalition regime.
Critics contended the fighting disclosed lack of popular support for Saigon's elected government. They said it also demonstrated American-South Vietnamese inability to defend even strongly-held cities.
Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said he doesn't subscribe to the theory of Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U.S. commander in Vietnam, that the Viet Cong terrorists are running out of steam.
Agreeing with Mansfield, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said if the raids were a last-gasp effort by the Viet Cong, "we are struggling with a mighty lively corpse."
But Sen. John C. Tower, R-Texas, said that after two days of briefings by Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, he's convinced that "despite recent suicidal attacks by the Viet Cong, major progress is being made toward an ultimate successful conclusion of our effort here."

At his news session, Johnson said new efforts to get back the intelligence ship Pueblo and her 83-man crew have failed. He said there had been further meetings on the Pueblo seizure between representatives of North Korea and the United States without satisfactory results.
As for the Viet Cong raids on several cities in South Vietnam, Johnson said: "The biggest fact is that the stated purposes of the general uprising have failed. Communist leaders counted on popular support in the cities for their effort. They found little or none."
He added that the general conclusion of his military advisers is that as a military movement, the Viet Cong attacks amounted to a failure.
Johnson said that while he didn't want to seem "unduly optimistic," when all the details of the raids are known he doesn't believe the Viet Cong "will achieve a psychological victory."
But Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt., said in an interview: "If this is failure, I hope the Viet Cong never have a major success."
On other matters, Johnson said:
— Reports from North Korea and neutral nations are that the Pueblo crew is being treated well with the wounded receiving treatment and "the body of the man who died is being held." He gave no other details.
— While additional deployment of combat troops to Vietnam is always possible, "we have added the men that Gen. Westmoreland has felt to be desirable and necessary." There are about 482,000 Americans there now with a total commitment of 525,000 men, previously scheduled, to be accomplished by June 30.

Admits It Was the Wrong Way
EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — Christopher Yenn, 21, of Boston has been freed after he said that giving away his draft card was the wrong way to express disapproval of the Vietnam war. He was placed on probation for two years Wednesday by U.S. District Judge Ernest Guinn.
Yenn said he gave his draft card to a Boston minister as his way of protesting the war. Guinn freed Yenn when the youth told the court he felt the war was wrong, but had decided he made his dissent known in the wrong way.

February Is Month to Renew Acquaintance With Rich Heritage

By MARY ANITA LASETER
Star Feature Writer
According to the local DAR, it was by an Act of the United States Congress that February 1968 was designated American History Month. By so doing, the American people have an opportunity to renew their acquaintance with the rich heritage of our great nation. If that history had not been recorded, we 20th century Americans would not know about the people and events of those early days.
Today, we salute Washington Irving, "The Father of American Literature," who was a namesake of "The Father of Our Country," George Washington. General Washington was a national hero when the 11th child was born to William and Sarah Irving on April 3, 1783, the year of the peace treaty that ended the American Revolution. It was only natural to name their son for the general, but they had no way of knowing that the boy would grow into one of the best-known of American writers whose last work written just before his death after long and careful research would be a 5-volume biography, "Life of Washington."

Many of George Washington's biographers look for granted that everyone knew how Washington looked and acted and how the country of his day looked. Not Washington Irving. He had a feeling for character, color, and detail, and he took the trouble to write about all this for us. He knew the setting and social structure of the times well and wrote them into the biography.
Irving didn't set out deliberately to be the great man of literature that he turned out to be. But anyone who wrote amusing legends like "Rip Van Winkle" and "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," serious biographies such as "The Life of Washington" and "Oliver Goldsmith," or descriptive narratives like "Alhambra" and "Captain Bonneville," could scarcely be called anything but an outstanding writer.
In addition to his writing he traveled much at home and abroad. He served in the legation in London and as Ambassador to Spain. He helped the emerging United States in so many ways to be understood by those who remained in England or returned after the revolution. There were many able writers in America long before him, but none drew the old world closer to the new than Irving did. He not only opened the eyes of Europeans to the values of America but opened the eyes of Americans to their own value.

Washington Irving studied law, and by the time he had passed the bar, he was madly in love with Matilda Hoffman. He asked for her hand, was accepted, and settled down to practice law with his brother, John. Since he liked domestic life and children, he would probably have made a good husband and father. But he never got a chance to find out, for Matilda died after a brief illness in the spring of 1809. The groom-to-be was crushed and retired to the country.

There, he completed writing "Knickerbocker's History of New York," begun by himself and his brother, Peter. To his surprise the book was a success, though some old families in New York were offended. Irving wanted to record history, but he treated the subject in a humorous manner. The book, a burlesque narrative, moved back and forth with some harsh truths and deep reflections.

Irving never took political sides, although he kept informed of events and current issues and he had firm opinions of proper conduct. He often said that there was sorrow and trouble enough in the world and that he could not add to it with his stories, so he chose pleasant things to write about if he could, and if the subject were not pleasant, then he wrote about it pleasantly. His disposition was reflected in the name of his home, "Sunnyside," on the banks of the Hudson.

Dial-a-Vote Plan Offered by Senator

By WALTER R. MEARS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Russell B. Long proposes a dial-a-vote system to speed decision making in the Senate.
"I'm just quietly trying to do a little behind the scenes work," the Louisiana Democrat said, "trying to get them to wake up to the fact that the telephone exists."
His objective: A system which would permit senators who are away from the floor to vote by telephone on bills and have their votes counted. He suggested the Senate secretary could handle the telephone dialing.
Long said in an interview the Senate wastes the equivalent of 200 days a year delaying votes to accommodate absent members or waiting for people to show up for roll calls.
"If you just let a guy call up and say 'I want to be recorded this way or that way,' then we could get on with the business," said Long, the assistant Democratic leader.
"We just waste a world of time because a senator wants to protect his absenteeism record," he added.
This happens in many ways. Often, a senator who is going to be late or absent asks a colleague to make sure the Senate keeps talking until he gets back. Major votes seldom are scheduled on Fridays or Mondays because many members are out of town.
Frequently, after the roll has been called, senator after senator rises to ask the chair whether his vote has been recorded and, if so, how. That slows the process while absent senators hurry to the chamber from their offices or other spots in the Capitol.
Long, discussing his absentee vote idea on the floor, said members who arrive at the last minute to cast votes usually don't have much information on the issue involved.
"When one comes charging in with his shirt tail hanging out and completely winded, the best thing to do is to ask the secretary of his party 'If you were me, how would you vote?'"

Korea Asks for More U.S. Troops

By BOB POOS
Associated Press Writer
SEOUL (AP) — South Korea has formally asked the United States for more American troops to guard against invasion, government sources said today. There were hints Korea might consider withdrawing its forces from Vietnam if the appeal was turned down.
No immediate comment was forthcoming on the request from Washington or American officials here, much of their attention apparently was focused on a third meeting with North Korea reportedly scheduled today at the Panmunjom truce office on the Pueblo incident.
Since the U.S. intelligence ship was seized Jan. 23 by North Korea there have been reports that two American divisions might be sent to Korea to reinforce the 50,000 U.S. troops now stationed here.
The Korean sources said the government is also seeking troops from its 15 other Korean War allies and that Foreign Minister Cho Kyuhah had sounded out the ambassadors of France, Australia and Turkey on the subject.
The chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the Korean National Assembly, Park Choon-ky, said that unless the United States deals with North Korea "resolutely and forcefully," the government should consider pulling out its 46,000 fighting men in Vietnam.
The United Nations Command refused comment on a report by a Seoul radio station, citing "official sources," that North Korean and U.S. representatives would meet at the Korean Military Armistice Commission at Panmunjom.
The command also declined to say anything about a meeting Friday between the parties. Reporting on that conference, President Johnson said in Washington that it had not produced "satisfactory results."

A U.N. spokesman announced today that the Panmunjom area, jointly controlled by the command and North Korea, would now be closed to newsmen, contrary to past practice. South Korea has hinted it is displeased about the meetings because the U.N. Command had no role in the Pueblo incident and a highly placed government source said the foreign ministry learned of Friday's conference nine hours after it began.
Kyu-hah said his government "will not necessarily oppose" the Panmunjom talks, but added the United States "must fully guard against any North Korean move to make such talks a sounding board for their propaganda indefinitely."

North Korea broadcast a purported "confession" of guilt by Lt. Stephen Robert Harris, 29, of Melrose, Mass., the Pueblo's research officer.
Harris was quoted as admitting that the Pueblo was "deep in the coastal waters" of North Korea and saying: "I apologize for our crime." The United States maintains that the vessel was outside North Korean territorial waters when it was seized.

Rails, Union Move Toward Era of Peace

By NEIL GILBRIDE
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's railroads and union leaders representing their 600,000 employees are cautiously moving toward what they hope will be a new era of peace in their historically tumultuous labor relations.
After signing two historic agreements on health and job protection in recent weeks, industry and union leaders plan a summit meeting to tackle other problems. And while wages, a main bone of contention, weren't mentioned, a union spokesman said they couldn't be ruled out.
"We are delighted," said chief union spokesman G. E. Leighty after the Association of American Railroads invited rail labor leaders to the talks.

Prison Women Have Child to Care for

CUMMINS PRISON FARM, Ark. (AP) — The 42 women in the Women's Reformatory at Cummins Prison Farm whose primary chore used to be pulling up grass around the area now have another chore—caring for a child which will be one-month old Tuesday.
The child's mother arrived at the prison last November to serve a 15-year sentence on a sordid charge.
The child, which has been named Woody Dwayne by his mother, is quartered in a corner of the white women's dormitory curtained off with sheets. The inmate mother's bed is beside her son's.
Mrs. Beatrice Crawford, who supervises the Reformatory and runs the huge kitchen for the 1,300 male prisoners at Cummins, said the child was born in Little Rock. The woman informed Mrs. Crawford on Jan. 23 that she had not been allowed to see her baby.
Mrs. Crawford informed Prison Supt. Thomas O. Murton of the situation.
"I was just lying there on the bed when Mr. Murton came in and asked me if I would like to have my baby," the woman said Thursday. "I told him I would so he said, 'Get your hat and coat, we're going to get it.'"
The inmates had set up a baby bed, bottles had been contributed and a layette accumulated by the time the baby was brought to the prison.

Lesson to Daughters?

Most Unlikely
Parents all across the country are at this moment, probably, shaking fingers at impatient children and pointing to the sad story of the California man who must sell his house to pay for the long-distance chats of his daughter.
They may as well save breath and blood pressure. Since telephone companies removed that warning bell and the voice of the lady who trilled "your three minutes are up, d'jew wish to continue?" from the domestic phone, there is no check upon gabbliness except those imposed by conscience or frugality.
Young women—and men—in love have neither. Once they begin murmuring together, hours go by and the toll mounts up. Mad-dened fathers have been known to tear out the phone by its roots (making themselves liable for malicious damage), to install pathetically inadequate locking devices and to utter vile maledictions. None of these succeeds. And those parents who now are exclaiming: "He had to sell his house!" probably get nothing in return from daughter except a sweet: "So what? He can get another house." — Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal

Signs Apparently Mean Very Little

DALLAS, N.C. (AP) — Residents of the small North Carolina community of Dallas have been clamoring for a sign on Interstate 85 pointing the way to their town.
But when the State Highway Department erected the sign this week there was more dissent. Mayor David Hoyle said the sign is so small it looks like a postage stamp.
He was explaining his views to newsmen near the sign Thursday when a passing motorist stopped his car and yelled, "Can you tell me how to get to Dallas?"

Texas Mexican Dies at 104

CHARLOTTE, Tex. (AP) — Fautino C. Munoz, a Mexican national who moved here in a covered wagon in 1911, died Thursday in a Pleasanton hospital at age 104.
Munoz, who was born Feb. 15, 1863, in Jeseas, Zacatecas, Mexico, was an active farmer near this South Texas town until he reached the age of 95 in 1958.

Merchants Protest

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Beirut's gold and gem merchants went on strike Thursday to protest a murder and robbery in the city's jewelry bazaar.
Thieves entered a jewelry shop during a raging storm Wednesday night, stole an unestimated amount of gems and kidnapped the owner's 29-year-old son. His body was found in his American sports car near the big gambling casino outside the city Thursday morning.
The victim was Antoine Assi, son of the president of the Lebanese Jewellers' syndicate.

Coffin Makers Doing Brisk Business

By PETER ARNETT
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — The only shops open in Saigon today were the coffin makers. Business was brisk.
Watchful Vietnamese soldiers stood guard as the artisans worked busily to meet the demand resulting from the devastating battles that have swept across the suburbs of South Vietnam's capital this week.
All other shops and businesses in the city of three million people have been ordered closed during the crisis. The population was told to stay indoors under a 24-hour curfew.
Vietnamese police and soldiers fired into the air to break up knots of curious bystanders that gathered on some streets. Roads leading to many government and U.S. buildings in the heart of the city were blocked off.
Cars and trucks pulled up at the half dozen coffin shops. Tearful relatives loaded the brown varnished boxes, decorated with highly colored religious symbols.
No official count has been given of the number of civilians killed in the fighting. The three main public hospitals reported more than 100 dead in their morgues. Scores more were known to be inside the blocks of squatters' shacks and refugee houses devastated by mortar and helicopter fire on the northwestern and southwestern outskirts of the city.
Hundreds of dead Viet Cong lay in the city's alleys. There were no coffins for them, only communal graves outside the city.
Hundreds of civilians have been wounded in the fighting. The medical director of the Servant Day Adventist Hospital on one edge of Saigon, Dr. Jess C. Holm, said: "We have 40 beds for 75 patients. We haven't turned anyone away. We'll put them in the chapel at the back of the hospital if we have to."

Fowler, Rusk, Mills Meet in Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., said Thursday, following a meeting with Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Treasury Secretary Henry Fowler, that President Johnson's administration was still working on the details of some export-import legislation.
"There is no decision yet on a program in this area, or whether anything actually will be recommended that requires legislation," Mills said following the meeting here.
Rusk and Fowler met with Mills to discuss the administration's program for easing the balance of payments deficit.
Mills' House Ways and Means Committee is scheduled to begin hearings Monday on proposals to limit travel abroad by American tourists. He refused to disclose what proposals would be made to limit tourism.
Mills said the President's proposed 10 percent surcharge on income taxes was discussed during the meeting. The proposal is currently bottled up in Mills' committee.

Returns From Safari With Strange Items

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Washington obstetrician whose hobby is big game hunting with bow and arrow has returned from a safari bearing perhaps the strangest trophies ever to come out of Africa—the adrenal glands of seven animals.
Picked in jars of preservative formaldehyde, the mementos will be the initial working materials for an experiment by Dr. C. Richard Gilbert, 51, the hunter-physician, to test his theory that a lion may be lion-hearted because of some "stamina" chemical in his body—and that such a chemical conceivably could withstand the rigors of surgery.

Gilbert, a lean six-footer whose mild bedside manner belies the risky life he leads outside office hours, believes wild animals must have some built-in chemical that enables them to survive for especially long periods—from 20 minutes to almost an hour—after an arrow shot, or a bullet, through heart or lung. He believes any such chemical may be associated with the adrenal gland and, if detected and isolated, might be duplicated for administering to human patients prior to extensive surgery to combat shock.
Gilbert's newly acquired adrenals include one gland each from two bull elephants, a lioness, a buffalo, an impala, a wildebeest, and a giant civet-cat.
One of the elephants was mortally wounded by a 24-inch fiberglass arrow fired from 28 yards away, but the beast still charged Gilbert's party and had to be brought down by a rifle bullet in the brain.
The doctor figures the arrow alone would eventually have killed the elephant, "although, if we hadn't finished him with gunshots, he well might have lived for hours and gone ramraging through a native village in his agony."

"Later, when we cut the elephant open to remove the adrenal," said Gilbert, "we found that the arrow had not penetrated deeply enough to touch the heart. However, there was a good quantity of hemorrhage in the right lung and much blood about this lung. Blood was also present in the elephant's trunk. This elephant was mortally wounded by an arrow—but killed by a gunshot in the brain."
Besides his collection of adrenal glands Gilbert brought back some other unusual trophies of potential scientific importance. In man's continuing fight against malaria, he took blood samples for microscopic examination from 30 natives and white hunters, and also from more than 100 animals and birds.
